

Meet the Commissioner

Commissioner Dexter L. McCoy is a proud native of Mission Bend and graduate of Travis High School, where his family and upbringing instilled in him a lifelong commitment to service.

After earning his degree from Boston University, he was honored to serve in the Obama Administration, focusing on college access and ensuring safe, supportive learning environments for students across the nation.

Upon returning home, Commissioner McCoy dedicated his talents to Fort Bend ISD as a district leader, equipping students and families with the resources to strengthen and connect their communities. His leadership also extended to the Gulf Coast Workforce Development Board, where he helped oversee nearly $400 million in workforce development funds to uplift and empower our regional workforce.

In local government, Commissioner McCoy has been a champion for innovation and equity. He successfully fought for a non-profit grant program and launched an $11 million public-private partnership to expand internet access while addressing critical community needs.

Since taking office, he and his team have prioritized policies that improve quality of life and ensure all communities have a seat at the table. Together, they have passed the county's first paid parental leave policy, expanded sick leave benefits, invested millions in parks and mobility projects, and appointed the precinct's first Latino justice of the peace. Commissioner McCoy has also fostered partnerships with organizations like Fit Houston and the Boys and Girls Club of Greater Houston to promote the physical, mental, and economic well-being of residents.

At home, Commissioner McCoy is a devoted husband to his wife Chelsea and proud father to their daughters Piper and Porter, along with their beloved Goldendoodle, Fitz.

The Black Annual Rodeo of Fort Bend County is privileged to be endorsed Commissioner McCoy for this historic celebration, honoring our shared values of community, culture, and legacy!
